What is the main difference between the religious ideal of the Jew and that of the Aryan? The main distinction can, I think, be expressed in a few words: Judaism strives, above all, to create a godlike society, whereas Aryan religions lay the stress on the breeding of the godlike individual. I do not mean to suggest that Judaism has no interest in the virtue of the individual or that Christianity or even Buddhism neglect the perfecting of society. But the main emphasis is laid on the perfect society in the one case, on the perfect individual in the other. Take the Ten Commandments; only the first two deal with the inner beliefs and purely devotional duties of the individual; the rest refer to the various duties of the individual, as a member of society—his duties towards his neighbour, his parents, his servants, even his cattle. The "Taryag Mitzvoth," too, the 613 commandments, mainly deal with man's duties towards his neighbour. Needless to recall the words of the Prophets, the Sabbath Year when all mortgaged land confiscated for debt had to be returned to the debtor, the Jubilee Year when a general redistribution of property had to be carried out to equalize economic conditions. Compare all this with a typical Aryan religion like Buddhism, and you will immediately see that, though mindful of man's duty to man, the main interest is concentrated on the inner purity of the individual. Christianity, of course, is an amalgamation of Jewish and Aryan ideals; its teaching of love as the general regulator of all wrongs is eminently social, and it is a Jewish idea preached by all our leaders, from Deuternonomy to Hillel; but Christianity is Aryan in the stress it lays upon the inner purification of the individual as such. It can best be illustrated by the idea of reward in future life which plays so prominent a part in the Gospels and in Buddhism —and which is totally unknown to the Old Testament. Christianity emphasises the promise of paradise or the threat of hell, Buddhism holds out Nirvanna as the goal of all strivings; the Old Testament contains no such lure nor menace, the goal of all human activities being, apparently, just the creation of a social organism based on justice. This absence of any direct reference to recompense or punishment in future life has been severely criticized by Christian theologians who have discovered in it a proof of the materialist nature of the Jewish mind. I hold a different opinion—I believe that it is much more beautiful to strive for social justice without any promise of individual reward than to try to be good in order to earn personal happiness in eternity or to escape eternal torture in hell. But it is not my point now to ascertain which of the two religious conceptions is the loftier; my aim is to ascertain what is the main difference between the two. Judaism says to the individual: Be just. Aryan religions say to the individual: Be pure.

The distinction may be elucidated still better if we consider the attitude adopted by the two religions towards the hermit —the individual who seeks to attain perfection, to save himself and the world by living alone in the desert, by keeping away from earthly temptations. To Buddhism and Christianity he is a saint; to Judaism he is of no use at all. Why, there are hardly any of the Ten Commandments which he is able to fulfill.

B.J.S.C. Picnic

Favored with excellent weather conditions, the members of the Beth Jacob Social Circle and their friends gathered at Grimsby Beach for their fourth annual picnic on Civic Holiday. The races which were keenly contested were as follows:

Men's 100 yard dash, Joe Laing and Harry Beube; ladies' 75 yard dash, Jessie Levin, Rae Katz; men's wheel barrow race, Harry Beube, P. Barr, J. Kulick, M. Kortsman; ladies' egg and spoon race, Bella Liebovitz, Jessie Levin; men's sack race, Harry Klein, Willie Schreiber; ladies' blindfold race, Frances Tick, Freda Kortsman; men's 100 yards, open, B. Liebovitz, Joe Laing; ladies' 75 yards, open, Freda Kortsman, Rae Katz; men's 220 yard dash, Sam Rosen, Henry Laing; ladies' peanut rolling race, Bella Silvert, Maimie Robinson; ladies' walking race, Esther Buchalter, Frances Tick; men's obstacle race, Ab. Walters, Sam Rosen.

The events were interesting and exciting, especially the ladies' egg and spoon race and the peanut rolling contest.

The baseball game played by the Beth Jacob Doves, winners of the Junior City Softball League, and members of the Beth Jacob Social Circle was won by the former team, Sutton's excellent pitching proving too much for the older boys. Goldblatt, pitching for the losers, played a creditable game both on the mound and at bat.

The raffle was won by Ab. Walters. Later in the evening dancing was enjoyed at the casino. The committee in charge of the picnic were: Sam Rosen, convenor; Ab. Walters, ex-officio, Harry Klein and the Misses Liebovitz and F. Katz.

London (J.T.A.).—The anti-Semitic "Morning Post" to-day prints an article written by a special correspondent who visited America after four years' service as the paper's correspondent in Palestine.

The writer in the "Post" declares that anti-Semitism is growing fast in America. It is, he declares, "an instinctive protest of the America democracy against something the Jew is introducing into American life."

Rightly or wrongly, he says, it is believed in America that the Jews constitute an "imperium in imperio." As to the Palestine question, the correspondent quotes an Arab as saying to him that Palestine would be returned to the Jews, when Spain is returned to the Arabs.

The development of the industrial life of Palestine, he declares, is of unquestionable benefit. The Jews may introduce some new machinery, some power from the Jordan, but the peasant life will continue as at present, entirely unaffected.

With great pomp the new British Administration was inaugurated in Palestine. An antiquities ordinance as well as the town-planning ideas of the Pro-Jerusalem Society were launched, but there has been no consistent execution of these plans because the administration does not feel itself too secure in the saddle, the correspondent reports.

The greatest British consideration he declares is the Pan-Islam movement and Britain must reckon with that movement.

In informed London circles, the "Post" correspondent is believed to be a friend of Governor Storrs.

"Thou Shalt Keep the Sabbath"

Tel Aviv, Palestine, the only 100% Jewish city of the world, has just passed an ordinance that makes "a public violation of the Sabbath" (chillul Shabbath b'far hethia) a misdemeanor and a punishable offence.

Some time ago Sir Herbert Samuel refused to yield to a request of the extreme orthodox Jews of Palestine to pass a strict Sabbath observance blue law, which would have been applicable to all Jewish residents of the country. In this Sir Herbert Samuel displayed rare tact and good judgment. He told his orthodox petitioners to use moral suasion rather than seek compulsory methods of enforcing the strict observance of the Sabbath.

It must always be borne in mind when dealing with legislation, that it is one thing to write a law on the statute book and quite another thing to enforce it. People have never been made either more moral or more religious by the mere passing of laws. Unless legislation is supported by public opinion, it remains a dead-letter.

We doubt very much whether the new Sabbath law of Tel Aviv can be made effective. Of course it is to be expected that the seventh day of the week should be observed in the most Jewish city of the world, as the day of rest, and from that point of view, the law just passed is good. The trouble will come in defining and interpreting what constitutes "a public violation of the Sabbath." If the people in power happen to be pious obscurantists and extremists, then they may invoke all the old laws of the Talmud and Schulchan Aruch, regarding Sabbath observance. In this case life will not be worth living for the young and liberal Jews who are apt to regard the "Sabbath as made for man and not man for the Sabbath."

The Sabbath is one of the greatest boons mankind has inherited. The Jews consecrated the Sabbath by adding to it the concept of holiness and making of it a divinely ordained institution. During the ages, however, the Sabbath observance became so rigid and puritanical as to destroy the very purpose for which it was created, namely that of rest and recreation which are the real and etymological meanings of the word. Rest means abstention from work for financial gain. It implies recreation, which means to restore and refill the battery of human energy which has a tendency to run down during six days of labor. It is conceivable that some people can accomplish this by a minute living up to the letter of the many laws prescribed for so doing which are contained in the Talmud and Schulchan Aruch and whose origin is in ages past. Many of us are familiar with this sort of Sabbath observance by our pious grandparents and even parents. But times have changed and with it our ideas. To us, this sort of Sabbath observance would be the very antithesis of rest and recreation. Many a young person finds his first break with religion to be his inability to observe the Sabbath in the prescribed orthodox fashion. Once he gets accustomed to breaking some of the old laws of the Sabbath, it becomes gradually easier and easier to drift away from Judaism altogether.

One thing is certain, and that is that the old Talmudic legal conception of what constitutes work, and therefore forbidden on the Sabbath, will have to be completely revised. These laws were passed at a time when the mechanical development of civilization was premature. Thus lighting a match, answering the telephone, carrying a kerchief, or riding in a vehicle, walking more than the prescribed distance, carrying an umbrella, or even one's prayer shawl and prayer book from the Synagogue on the Sabbath are all classed as forms of work, and forbidden. All this has changed. What was work a thousand years ago is child's play to-day. It is therefore evident that we can no longer expect people to live up to laws in the twentieth century, which were framed in the first century. Besides, it is difficult to see how the minutiae of Sabbath observance laws are at all conducive or related to religiosity and spirituality.

The Jews of the Diaspora who wish to retain the observance of the Sabbath as a day of spiritual and physical recreation and rest are anxiously looking forward to the way in which this law of Tel Aviv will work itself out. The Jews of Palestine, living as they do a 100% Jewish life, are in a better position to reform Jewish law and set the standard for Jewish religious observance than are we in the Diaspora. In this respect, Palestine is in a strategic position. The way in which the Jews there go about reforming and modifying Jewish law, will have a direct influence in shaping the Jewish religious life of the Jews of the rest of the world. We feel confident that in Palestine, the true spirit of Jewish law, which is one of adjustment to changing conditions, will re-assert itself.

A Strange Complaint

A property owner the other day appeared before the Building Assessment Committee for Toronto, and pleaded for a reduction in the valuation placed upon his house, on the ground "that the increased number of Jews in his neighbourhood has depreciated the value of his property."

This is indeed the first time that we have heard of such a plea. Any realty man will tell you that the increased number of Jews in a neighbourhood usually advances the value of property. The enterprise of the Jew is responsible for transforming purely residential neighbourhoods into high-rental commercial districts. This is true of every city where Jews live in large numbers.

Jews are also accustomed to spending their money. They seldom hoard it. When fortune smiles on them they quickly move from the poorer neighbourhood, and seek a home in the better outlying sections of the city where property is expensive. The demand they thus create stimulates rather than depreciates realty values.

What is true of a city with Jews is also true of a nation. A country that has a large Jewish population prospers in proportion to the number of its Jewish inhabitants. The United States is an excellent illustration. Spain of the Middle Ages was the greatest and most prosperous nation of the then known world. It had the largest Jewish population of any country at that time. After it expelled its Jews, Spain started to deteriorate. Spain has no Jews to speak of to-day. It is also one of the least important countries of the world to-day. Spain recently invited Jews to come back, but the Jew has too good a memory.

In this connection the line in "Welcome Stranger" is apropos. Says the Jew in the play to his Gentile neighbours, "The reason this place is a village and not a city is that there are no Jews here."

Thus it seems to be the fate of nations, that those which persecute and expel their Jews always suffer. Spain and Russia are the best examples. "The guardian of Israel sleepeth not, nor slumbereth."

We don't believe that prejudice against Jews is going to disappear until Meshiach comes, and that's a long time, but under the circumstances and as a matter of policy, we can see good in the proud boast of the Winnipeg Montefiore Club that they "are always eager to keep up the good name of the Jews before their fellow-citizens, never overlooking an opportunity to make a good impression." We could see even more good in it, if we thought the club meant Jewish fellow-citizens as well as Gentile. It is a pity that we must always be putting our best foot forward in the company of Gentiles, and trusting to luck when among our own. Certainly, if we behave badly, we are just as obnoxious to plenty of Jews as we are to non-Jews. Our attitude is that of the woman who serves her family on the kitchen oil-cloth and takes out the linen and silver for casual acquaintances.

Carl Sherman, now attorney-general of New York State, once said in our hearing, that the Bnai Brith or any group of Jews could do better than anti-defamation work by sending committees of men to Jews who misbehaved to warn them that they must be law-abiding and quiet, or suffer from the Jewish community itself. Now that's an attitude that gets nearer home, although it is not perfect, because what Sherman aimed at in the end, was perfection of the Jewish community in the eyes of the Gentiles.

The highest standards of manners and ethical conduct are neither specifically Jewish nor Gentile, and it is a confession of weakness that we must always be careful, not how we act in the sight of men, but how we act in the sight of Gentiles.

It seems odd that such a shrewd and sensible person as Henry Ford should have an obsession about the generally ornery character of the Jewish brethern. It is apparent from his interview that he attributes to their pernicious machinations many of the evils of our society; and some of his observations about the "Jew financiers" sound highly fantastic. Mr. Chesterton once remarked that Jews may roughly be divided into two classes, good and bad, just like the rest of us; but, generally speaking, in the case of the Jews, one could distinguish a sheep from a goat by the label, for the bad Jew called himself Montmorenci Delatour, while the good Jew was named Isaac Jacobs. Whenever one of Mr. Ford's inurbanities about the Jews comes under our eye, we recall Mr. Chesterton's words and wonder if, perhaps in some crucial moment, a sharp gentleman named Montmorenci Delatour may have put it over Mr. Ford in a humiliating and expensive manner. However that may be, we are willing to welcome Henry Ford's valuable contributions to civic good sense, and leave his strictures against the race of Abraham to the psycho-analysts.—The Freeman.

A small radio receiving set has been installed at every bedside in Beth Israel Hospital, New York, in the hope that the device will lighten the patients' sufferings by turning their minds from their own discomfort and loneliness to concerts, lectures and news reports. This is the result of a letter from a discharged patient who said that he could have slept much better at night if he could have kept in touch with the outside world.

Keeping in touch with the outside world is often a dubious advantage to the man whose nerves are torn by the useless noises of honking horns, banging doors and raucous voices, as well as by the swift way the first of the month has of rolling around. More than once he may envy the quiet seclusion of the hospital where rubber heels are the rule and no one shouts. To him there is no pathos in the report of the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labour which tells of a Georgia family of which the father had not called for his mail in a year, the mother had not been to the nearest settlement in seven years, and the grandmother had lived to the age of sixty before she saw a train. It is a real literature and paints the picture of a bit of paradise away from bridge fiends and bills.

Churchill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Churchill. Rabbi Kahanovitch officiated, assisted by S. Astrow. The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother A. Burnstein was becomingly attired in a gown of white kitten's ear crepe, draped and caught at one side with a pearl ornament. Her veil was embroidered and artistically arranged with a coronet of orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of ophelia roses and lilies-of-the valley. She was attended by Miss Sara Churchill, sister of the groom, who wore a gown of beige crepe romaine, a model hat to match, and carried American beauty roses. Mr. Maurice J. Burnstein acted as best man. Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served, the tables being beautifully decorated with cut flowers. Later Dr. and Mrs. Churchill left on a motor trip to Detroit Lakes and Minneapolis.

LADIES' SOCIETY PICNIC
Jewish Orphanage Made Happy

What could be termed as a successful and enjoyable picnic was the one organized by the Ladies' Society of the Jewish Orphanage and Children's Aid of Western Canada for the children of the Orphanage, which took place Wednesday, July 25. It seemed as if nature itself wanted the kiddies to have a good time, and "old Sol" came out in his fullest glory with bright promises of a clear sky for the entire day.

The Ladies' Society who are ever busy with the Orphanage, and never too tired to do anything at all to please the children, turned out in full force as early as 7 o'clock. A group of them were busy in the kitchen of the Orphanage making sandwiches, packing meats of all kinds and arranging boxes with all kinds of prepared goodies to eat, packages and bottles of every description. Another group was busy arranging the games, a third the transportation, etc.

The entire Society was divided into various committees, and, of course, the ever-untiring Mrs. Goldin was busy everywhere, running from one committee to the other, from one group of ladies to the other.

Nine a.m., everything was in full readiness waiting for the truck to come and take the baskets, boxes and cases away to the Park. At 9.30 all the children marched off to the cars and away to the spacious and glorious Kildonan Park. There the committees got busy again unpacking the multitude of boxes and cases and setting the tables, while the children had a long programme of games and races to run off. There were races for children from 3 to 4, from 4 to 5, from 5 to 6, and so on up to 15. Perhaps the most amusing of all games was the tug-of-war between the little boys and girls, and the nicest thing of all was that the girls beat the boys, and beat them badly. Of course, they would have never done the trick had it not been for Esther Month, six years old, the young farmerette, who held the anchor and pulled. "Gee, she pulled!" She would not stand being beaten by the boys. No! not she. She can beat a good one-half dozen boys herself. Fresh from the farm—you know.

Not the least interesting was the tug-of-war between two groups of boys, between twelve and fourteen, divided into Lennettists and Bellists. Lennett slim and slender, and Bell quite plump. Now whom do you think won? Contrary to all expectations the young, slim Lennett came out with flying colours, for Lennett was smart enough to choose the best scrappers who pulled and pulled until large drops were on their foreheads, but they would not give up, because they knew it was worth the trouble, as thirteen good jack-knives were awaiting the winning side, and so the games continued until the dinner bell rang, and didn't they run for the bell? They did not remember being so hungry for a long, long time.

After a morning's races and games in the fresh air, no wonder the hunger bothered them because they knew from last night what good things there were to eat. They knew that the ladies were busy, and they knew that the Superintendent did not go to bed until two, and was up as early as five o'clock in the morning; they knew that when people are busy that way, there is always something bound to come out of it, and this time something good, for the tables were laden with a multitude of good things: Cakes, salads, apples and good lemonade to drink, and plenty of milk for those who wanted it, and plenty of vegetables and eggs and cheese and tomatoes and what not.

After everybody had his full share, all went off again to the fields; this time it was baseball, football and long distance racing, and chorus singing, and all kinds of merry making. Of course, no one forgot the ice cream that was going to be served at four o'clock. There were plenty of cones for everyone, and so they ran and played and sang till supper. The supper was even better than the dinner. To use the words of the famous Morris Eiss, who is famous around the Orphanage for his ability to eat and crack jokes about what he eats. "Gee, I wish we had a picnic like this every day. Weren't the pies swell? Too bad I could not eat all I had, because I couldn't."

And so the large family of 112 children were kept merry from early in the morning till bed-time, thanks to the untiring efforts of the Ladies' Society.

As for the ladies it is true they were tired after the day was finished, very tired. But did they care? Just a look at their smiling faces would convince anyone that they were glad that they were tired. They were glad that the children were happy. They were glad that their labours were rewarded with a bright and happy day for the children whom they love so dearly. They were glad that the day turned out so beautiful, and they were glad that the children carried home with them one or more gifts that will keep them happy for some time after the picnic. And they saw a vision of 112 children lying in their clean cots that night with the silver moon shining through the windows and the tall proud elm trees fanning the nice cool summer breeze over their little heads, playing with their curls and covers, still dreaming of the beautiful and pleasant day they just had, and this vision made them doubly happy.

HABOINIM

In honour of their past president, Mr. H. A. Shanas, and two other members, Mr. Harry Courtney and Mr. Joe Cooper, who are leaving in a few days for Chicago, Haboinim gave a farewell party on Sunday evening, August 5, at 496 Aberdeen Avenue. The affair was most enjoyable in every way, and was well arranged. Mr. Shanas, as retiring president installed the new officers: namely, Mr. D. Cohen, president; Miss C. Pall, vice-president; Mr. A. Fieldman, treasurer; Miss A. Newhouse, corresponding secretary; Mr. N. Lockshin, Jewish recording secretary; and Mrs. F. Stoiler, recording secretary. Mr. N. Schiffer, honorary president, on behalf of the club made the presentations to the departing members. Mr. Shanas was the recipient of a Jewish Colonial Bank Trust share, and Messrs. Courtney and Cooper were each presented with a book on Palestine.

A meeting of Haboinim will take place on Sunday evening, August 12, at the Zionist Headquarters. An interesting program me has been arranged.

New York (J.T.A.).—Dr. Max Kahn, a member of the medical faculty of Columbia University, has discovered a cure for diabetes, it was announced at a meeting of physicians at Beth Israel Hospital. The new remedy, which takes the form of artificial fat and is called intravit, is highly praised by another Columbia professor, Dr. McKee, professor of chemical engineering, who has worked out a method for its manufacture. "It is a triumph of research," he declared.

BALFOURS

The Balfour baseball team played Ward's Island and lost by the score of 8-1, thereby losing their first game this year. "Buddy" Greisman pitched fine ball.

The Balfours also defeated Osler seniors by 11-7. The feature of the game was the spectacular fielding of Chaplan, and the hitting of Mac Cohen. The play offs for the city championship will begin on Tuesday, August 21.

Any members who wish to play tennis will find the net at the club-rooms. Courts are at Alexandra Park and can be used any evening after six o'clock. A meeting of the Executive will be held at the club on Friday, August 17, at nine o'clock. Messrs. Bennett, Donn, Dworkin, Lipson, Pollack, English, Einbinder and Rogow please take notice.

THANKS!

Mr. Archie Drainin, honorary patron of the 59th Jewish Boy Scouts, thanks those who contributed, irrespective of creed, to the Jewish Boy Scouts' Camp Fund, an amount totalling over $500.00.

Is It Worth While?

Is it or is it not good policy to risk valuable food for the "saving" of a few cents' worth of ice? Doctors, domestic science authorities, housewives who have tested the case—all know that food can only be properly protected in the even, dry temperature of a good refrigerator. You save the food, of course; but what is much more important, you save the family health.

MARRIAGES

Schwartz—Yankovitch

A pretty wedding was solemnized when Bessie, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Yankovitch, was united in marriage to Mr. Paul Schwartz, of Kapuskasing. The ceremony was performed at McCaul Street Synagog on July 29. The bride, who was given away by her parents, looked charming in white canton crepe and pearl trimmings. She carried a beautiful bouquet of roses. After the ceremony a dinner was given at the home of the bride's parents, Dundas Street West. Covers were laid for one hundred at tables beautifully decorated. During the dinner toasts were proposed to the couple. A large number of telegrams were received. A dance followed the dinner. Mr. and Mrs. Schwartz left for Niagara Falls, Buffalo and other points. On their return they will reside in Kapuskasing.

Mr. C. Wilder, of Ottawa, announces the marriage of his daughter Tilly to Mr. J. B. Finmark, of Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. I. Finmark, on Sunday, July 29. The ceremony was solemnized by Rabbi Gordon, assisted by Cantor Saitz, at the groom's home, 575 Bathurst Street. The wedding was a quiet one and attended only by the immediate families of the bride and groom. Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Finmark left on a trip to the Thousand Islands. On their return they will temporarily reside at 575 Bathurst Street until their departure for California where they intend to make their home.

ENGAGEMENTS

Mr. and Mrs. H. Kaminsky, of Niagara Falls, Ont., announce the engagement of their daughter Rose to Mr. L. Quitt, of Toronto.

BORN

A daughter at the General and Marine Hospital, St. Catharines, on Sunday, August 12, to Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Volpe (née Esther Shulman).

RESTORE MAUSOLEUM TO "GER ZEDEK," FAMOUS CONVERT TO JUDAISM

Warsaw (J.T.A.)—The Vilna Jewish community has restored the mausoleum of the Ger Zedek, which is situated in the Vilna Jewish cemetery.

The Ger Zedek, who adopted the name of Abraham ben Abraham, was a famous convert to Judaism, who was burnt at the stake in Wilna in 1749. He was a Polish nobleman, Count Valentine Potocki. Having adopted Judaism in Amsterdam, and residing for a time in Germany, he returned to Poland, where he lived among the Jews in the town of Ilye, near Vilna.

While in the synagog one day, he was irritated into commenting severely on the conduct of a boy who was disturbing those occupied in prayer and study. The boy's father was so enraged that he informed the authorities that the long-sought Ger Zedek was in Ilye.

Potocki was arrested. The entreaties of his mother and friends failed to induce him to return to Christianity. After long imprisonment he was burnt alive in Vilna on the second day of Shevuoth. It was unsafe for the Jews to witness the burning, but one Jew, Reb Zbitkes, who had on beard, went among the crowd and by bribery secured some of the martyr's ashes which were later buried in the Jewish cemetery. A letter of pardon from the king arrived too late to save him.

Gruenbaum Calls Welzmann Wrecker of Cabinets

Opposition Leader Speaks as "Conscience of Former Democratic Faction to Which Weizmann Belonged"

SURRENDER OF PRINCIPLES DENOUNCED

Dr. Hantke and Jacob Fishman Defend Weizmann Stand

Carlsbad (J.T.A.). The general debate which commenced at the Thirteenth Zionist Congress last Thursday has developed a strong opposition to the Weizmann-Sokolow leadership. The opposition may be bulked under two heads; those like Deputy Gruenbaum, of Poland who is opposed to Dr. Weizmann personally, and an opposition emanating from disappointment and dissatisfaction with Zionist progress.

The most impassioned attack on the Weizmann-Sokolow régime was delivered by Deputy Gruenbaum. At the end of it he received an ovation from those in agreement with him and was warmly congratulated by opponents. Characterizing the present conflict in the Zionist Organization as a "constitutional one," Deputy Gruenbaum accused Dr. Weizmann of having precipitated a crisis in the Executive Committee which is threatening to wreck his cabinet as it was wrecked at the Twelfth Congress. Dr. Weizmann wishes to create gods that he might destroy them, Gruenbaum asserted, referring to the president's extension policy.

"We wish no expressionist politics; nor do we share in Dr. Weizmann's defaitist feeling," Deputy Gruenbaum hotly asserted. "We decline to surrender our principles or make illusory sacrifices. We refuse to say the mass movement will not build Palestine. We can co-operate with what bodies and under what conditions we wish, but there is no need for capitulation. We demand the Agency be responsible to a sufficient body; otherwise, we shall have irresponsibility and chaos. We demand furthermore that the Zionist leaders be responsible to Congress."

Continuing, Deputy Gruenbaum said the reconstruction of the Jewish Homeland was a miracle and one does not bargain with miracles. The unemployment in Palestine he said, was responsible for emigration from the country, an emigration which is causing chaluzium to close [illegible]

[illegible] which has its roots in economic depression need not depress us. The political situation has changed [illegible] In the past the government in London was [illegible] but Jerusalem was [illegible] London is also bad. All [illegible] and the moment being unfavorable, he insisted it was time to [illegible] and not great saints.

[illegible] of the Executive Committee to which Dr. [illegible] Deputy [illegible] for the [illegible] of the Agency as a [illegible]

[illegible] that the people with whom we [illegible] the Zionist [illegible] the Executive [illegible] surrender our [illegible] the Executive [illegible] from [illegible] Political [illegible]

he had, the Palestine task to-day would have been in the hands of the Jea, and not the Zionist Congress. We cannot, and shall not, surrender the principle of national self-deliverance. If this is the price we are to pay for the extension of the Agency, let Dr. Weizmann say so. There are two ways for us to follow: illusions or idols, or the way that leads to God and the people," the speaker concluded his impassioned plea.

Dr. Hantke urged confidence in the Weizmann-Sokolow leadership, although he said in the course of his remarks ours was a "great people with little leaders." The intensity of the Zionist work alone will decide to what extent the Balfour Declaration will be realized. Dr. Hantke insisted that the chaluzim spirit must prevade not only the hard pioneering work, but should also permeate the economic endeavours. The Zionist Organization, he said, was strong; it was the central office that was weak. Dr. Hantke concluded with a glowing tribute to officials of the Zionist Organization.

Declaring that lack of enthusiasm was due to suspicion, Jacob Fishman, of New York, said he failed to account for this suspicion in Zionist ranks at a time when leaders like Louis Marshall were referring to Dr. Weizmann as "our leader." The American proposals, he said, were misunderstood. "What we insist upon is the fulfillment of our contract with the Jewish masses." Through the Keren Hayesod, new people have been discovered, and gained for the Zionist movement. If the Zionist Organization has made no appreciable progress since the Balfour Declaration, it is because there is a constant attempt to wreck our united leadership. The Left and the Right are fighting over the Kashruth question, and clear issues are made unclear. The American Jews expected that from this Congress a message would go out that the Zionist Organization is ready to accept all Jews who are ready to aid in the upbuilding of Palestine. Such a course will strengthen the Zionist authority; a contrary course will discourage it. American Zionists do not fear new elements. Coalition governments are being formed everywhere. If we find it is impossible to co-operate with the men we desire to join us we will return again to the Zionist party. The Americans, too, are anxious to see a World Congress, but years are necessary for its preparation. The extension of the Agency means a gradual World Congress."

Morris Meyer, of London, spoke in defence of the Administration, calling upon the delegates "to follow Weizmann whose achievements were superhuman."

A storm broke out at the Congress yesterday when Rabbi Meyer Berlin, head of the Mizrachi in America, and the left wing labourites engaged in an exchange of charges.

The verbal clash started when Rabbi Berlin charged that the "left wing" were putting obstacles in the way of orthodox "chaluzim" who desired to settle in Palestine.

"The revival of Jewish life and culture in Palestine means more people, and where there are people, there is also money," said Rabbi Berlin. "The present depression in Palestine is due to the lack of enthusiasm. The Left Wing are hindering the entrance and employment of orthodox chaluzim."

Rabbi Berlin's charge against the Left Wing was followed by numerous protests from the labourites. The Mizrachist leader continued undaunted, accusing the Zionist Organization of seeking to give the organized labourites a monopoly of the work of Palestine.

"Your chaluzim are strike-breakers," the labourites shouted at Rabbi Berlin, who hurled back, "Your Left Wing workers attack and beat our chaluzim."

"It's a lie," volleyed back the labour delegates.

Ben Zevi, one of the vice-presidents, who was occupying the chair during the debate was unable to restore order. Charges that Ben Zevi was partial in his rulings during the debate accentuated the confusion. Herman Struck, the distinguished Mizrachist and artist, demanded that Ben Zevi either maintain an impartial attitude or else relinquish the gavel. Defending Ben Zevi, S. Kaplanski declared that the Mizrachists should accustom themselves to endure Socialist chairmen at Zionist Congresses. When order was finally restored, Rabbi Berlin continued his address, concluding with the demand that the Zionist Executive pay greater heed to the religious side of Zionism.

Ottawa Bnai Brith Picnic

The third annual picnic of the Ottawa Lodge No. 885, Independent Order Bnai Brith, was held last Sunday afternoon at Hiawatha Park. In spite of the threatening weather, the event was attended by more than two hundred members and friends and proved most successful.

The picnickers met at 10 o'clock at the place of business of Mr. M. Freedman, George Street. Some travelled by motor, while others took the boat at Queen's Wharf.

Thanks to the excellent transportation arrangements made by Mr. M. Max, convenor of transportation, everything went off without a hitch. The convenors of the remaining items on the programme also worked well. They were: Michael Freedman in charge of refreshments, B. H. Fogle in charge of prizes and S. Lepofsky, in charge of sports.

One of the most entertaining events was the baseball game between the Y.M.H.A. and the Bnai Brith team. The former won by 10 to 6, the batteries being N. Abelson and S. Greenberg, and I. L. Cohen and M. Brodie. The results were as follows:

Girls' race, six years and under, Ida Dover, Naomi Cole, Clara Dworkin; boys' race, six years and under, B. Dover, M. Smolkin, Henry Brodie; girls' race, six to ten years, Rosalie Glick, Helen Dworkin, Edith Dover; boys' race, six to ten years, Edgar Marks, Henry Brodie, Lionel Marks; boys' race, 10 to 13 years, B. Brodie, Lionel Marks, H. Brodie; married ladies' race, Mrs. S. Strodie, Mrs. H. Cohen; married men's race, Mr. Harry Cohen, Mr. Charles Bochner; walking race, B. Fogle, H. Abramson, S. Lepofsky; single ladies' race, the Misses Lily Lipofsky, S. Fogle and M. Brodie; single men's race, S. Lepofsky, Beryl Brodie, Charles Bochner; three-legged race (mixed), Miss Jeanne Ross and Mr. I. L. Cohen, Mrs. I. L. Cohen and Mr. S. Lepofsky; men's race, Michael Freedman and B. Fogle; standing broad jump, S. Lepofsky, B. Brodie and M. Brodie; hop, step and jump, B. Brodie, S. Lepofsky and M. Brodie; needle and thread race, Miss M. Horwitz, Miss S. Horwitz and Henry Brodie; running broad jump, S. Lepofsky, B. Brodie and M. Brodie; sack race, Beryl Brodie, Lionel Marks and Edgar Marks; ladies' throwing baseball, Miss C. Caloof, Mrs. I. L. Cohen; tug-of-war, married men vs. single men, won by married men.

Obituary

Mrs. Michael Raport

The funeral of the late Mrs. Michael Raport, 271 Rideau Street, the victim of an automobile fatality which occured on Lariault's Hill, near Kingsmere, P.Q., took place Tuesday afternoon, August 7th. The respect in which Mrs. Raport was held and the sorrow which her tragic death occasioned was shown by the large assembly which gathered at her late home to pay their last respects. Hundreds of Jewish citizens attended and close to half a hundred accompanied the remains to their final resting place. The funeral left the house at 2.30 o'clock and proceeded along Rideau Street, past the Rideau Street Synagogue where the family has worshipped for the past twenty years. At the graveside an impressive service was chanted by Rev. H. Dubitsky, of the Shaar Hashomayim Congregation, Montreal, a visitor to the city. Seldom indeed had the Jewish community of Ottawa been so stirred, and the long sorrowing procession numbered in its ranks at least two hundred Jewish citizens. The chief mourners were the husband, Mr. Michael Raport, the son, Samuel, and five daughters, the Misses Edith, Irene, Esther, Lillian and Helen. The other survivors are Mr. H. Sugarman, father, three brothers, Isidore Sugarman, Hyman Sugarman and Lazar Sugarman, in Europe, and one sister, Mrs. M. Rabin, in New York.

ROUND UP OF HOUSEFURNISHERS IN FEDERATION DRIVE

New York (J.T.A.)—A proposed round-up of more than a thousand manufacturers in the house-furnishing trades of New York during the current drive to raise $500,000 deficit in the budget of three and a half millions of the Federation for the support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies was announced by Francis Leffler, new division head at a luncheon given to buyers and manufacturers by Samuel J. Bloomingdale, president of Bloomingdale Bros., in his office yesterday.

The meeting was held in order to complete the organization of more than 100 trades and professions, all operating under the auspices of the Business Men's Council of Federation to raise this deficit before the end of 1923. Mr. Leffler was elected chief of his trade representative business men chosen by Mr. Bloomingdale. The field of the new division head will include hardware, crockery and house-furnishing lines.

Mr. Bloomingdale is chairman of all these groups as well as furniture and glassware. The heads of these lines elected by Felix M. Warburg and Adolph S. Straus, co-chairmen of the Business Men's Council of $5,000,000 Jewish Federation, will be responsible for raising $5,000,000.
